Specification: GCC The Ferrari 355 was a nailed-on classic from the moment it arrived, yet its objectively superior 360 Modena replacement has taken a long time to grow into its handsome skin. While the 355 can rightly claim to have turned around Ferrari's fortunes in the mid-1990s, it was 1999's 360 that ushered in full aluminium construction, electronically controlled suspension and, perhaps most importantly, an ease of ownership that meant Ferrari owners wouldn't face yet-another-joke about Italian build quality from fellow petrolheads. That latter point is relative as no supercar is ever going to be cheap to buy, run or repair, but the 360 made a mighty fine stab of it and getting on terms with the Porsche 911 that was squarely in its sights at launch. Ferrari developed the 355's V8 engine into a 395bhp 3.6-litre unit offered with either a six-speed manual or 'F1' paddleshift gearbox carried over from the 355. The latter transmission outsold the manual when new. Power for both transmissions comes courtesy of a 3586cc naturally-aspirated V8 engine. It's a real delight to stretch this motor to its 8500rpm rev limit and it sounds just how you imagine a Ferrari should at full tilt. At lower revs, it makes itself known in the cabin but not obnoxiously so when cruising or driving in town. Throttle response is instant, which can make slow speed driving a little jerky until you learn to modulate your right foot's inputs appropriately. As the Ferrari 360 demands the driver to adapt to it to some extent, it gives the car the sense of being an old-school supercar Copy and paste the link below into your browser for a introduction to this vehicle: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Erxk3GN4WUc> The car is packed with extras: ✓ Black Leather Steering Wheel ✓ Cuoio (Tan) Carpets ✓ Crema Leather Interior ✓ Black Leather Upper Zones ✓ 'F1' Gearbox ✓ Cuoio (Tan) Contrast Piping ✓ Electrically Adjustable Seats ✓ Spare Tyre ✓ Original Manuals ✓ Original Tool Kit ✓ Original Jack Kit ✓ Embossed Ferrari Cavellino Headrests ✓ Cuoio (Tan) Rear Wall ✓ Electric Mirrors ✓ Red Brake Calipers ✓ Giallo Centre Caps ✓ Air-Conditioning ✓ Electric Windows And many more.
